

Does JetBlue have a high cancellation rate? Full-Service

JetBlue Air generally maintains a relatively low cancellation rate, typically hovering around 1-2%. This compares favorably to many other airlines, both budget carriers and full-service airlines. This means that, statistically, the vast majority of JetBlue Air flights operate as scheduled. However, it's essential to remember that these figures represent averages. The actual cancellation rate can fluctuate depending on various factors, including:

- Time of year: Certain times of the year, such as periods of inclement weather or peak travel seasons, may see a slight increase in cancellations.
- Specific route: Some routes might be more susceptible to disruptions due to factors like weather patterns or air traffic congestion.
- Unforeseen circumstances: Unexpected events like mechanical issues, air traffic control disruptions, or public health crises can lead to flight cancellations across all airlines, including JetBlue Air.

While a low overall cancellation rate offers some reassurance, it's crucial to be prepared for the possibility of disruptions, even if they are infrequent."
